... EDITORIALS ...

From respect for the custom inaugurated by preceding classes of the High School, with a wish that in the future she may be cheered by reverting to its memorable and historic pages, with a desire to leave to posterity a souvenir of her acts and career, the class of '05 have decided to issue the first volume of THE VISTA.

Because this annual portrays the PAST, PRESENT and FUTURE, it is called THE VISTA, and we trust the classes of the future will do honor to the name which we have given, by retaining it. From the PAST are drawn little glimpses of bygone days; of joy and sorrow, sunshine and shadow. But the past appeals more strongly to the alumni, because they have lived among similar scenes, and have been given like instruction in their youth, and the thoughts of the merry days of yore bring them comfort and pleasure. From the PRESENT we draw scenes of the hearty, healthy vitality and the strenuous life and unconquerable love of fun of the classes of today. The vista of the FUTURE discloses, we trust, a direct and truthful portrayal of the future of many students.

After much hard work on the part of the editors, including some almost sleepless nights and many weary days, the annual is presented to the public. There are many things which we should like to have chronicled had we not been hampered by a lack of space. We do not claim to have gained perfection in editorship, and we are conscious of many flaws and blemishes; but we leave the task of securing perfection to the editors of future annuals.

The High School, as a whole, has made rapid progress over the rate of past years. Only three or four years ago there was absolutely no distinct athletic spirit in our school. Today Foot Ball, Basket Ball, Base Ball, Track Work, Boating and many other forms of athletics exercise the body, while the mind is being invigorated in the class room. In the latter department we are also advancing. Last year George McLeish obtained, from the World's Fair, a blue ribbon for his excellent botany drawings. The officials at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition complimented highly "The Senior Trial" which had been reported and sent there. Each year we are accomplishing more in our studies and the prospect of gaining knowledge in all lines is increasing rapidly.

We have endeavored to "roast" all impartially but we hope that, contrary to the rules of culinary, no one will get "hot" in the process. We hope that you will find nothing said about yourself that you do not relish; but if you do, please take it in the spirit in which we have meant it—simply that of fun loving jollity—then grin and bear it.

We wish to thank all those who have helped in any way in publishing THE VISTA. We thank Prof. Buerk and the faculty for their interest and assistance, Kiel Garrison for designs and special headings, a number of students for securing advertisements and the advertisers for their financial aid. As the firms who have taken space with us have thus helped us, we think it only fair that we, as High School students, should make our purchases from them and thus, in a measure, repay them.

Like Chaucer, the renowned old English poet, we sometimes question—

"Oh little book, thou art so unconn'g,
How darst thou put thyself in press for dred?"

Yet we are consoled and inspired by the thought expressed by that other famous English poet, Lord Byron—

"'Tis pleasant sure to see one's name in print;
A book's a book, although there's nothing in it."

THE EDITORS.

... THE PEOPLE'S COLLEGE ...

The new High School building will be ready for occupancy for school purposes in September of the present year. The building will be christened by the graduating exercises of the class of 1904-05. While, unfortunately, that class will not be able to enjoy the superior comforts and facilities which the new building will afford to all the High School pupils of this city in the future, yet its members are at least to have the honor of belonging not only to the largest class which has ever graduated from the New Albany High School but the first class to receive its diplomas from the splendid stage in the magnificent auditorium of the new building.

The new High School building has been erected at a total cost, including building and equipments, of about $95,000. It is located at the intersection of East Sixth and Spring streets. The building has a frontage of 141 feet on Spring street and is kite or wing shaped, its greatest depth through the center being approximately 130 feet. A separate boiler house at the rear of the premises furnishes steam heat for the building and minimizes the danger of fire.

The building contains in all thirty-four rooms of every type, of which fifteen are recitation rooms, the remainder being given up to toilet rooms, locker rooms, laboratory rooms, office rooms, etc., such as usually characterize High School buildings of this kind. A gymnasium which is to be well equipped, 40x70 feet, is located in the basement; and the auditorium with a seating capacity of 700, by far the best audience room in the city, is found on the second floor. Suites of office rooms for the School Board and Superintendent and the Principal of the High School are located on opposite sides of the main entrance.

The building is up to date in every particular and contains the very latest devices of every kind for the comfort and facility of the work. The Frick Time Clock system is to automatically strike the programs for the school. A master clock in the office rooms controls by electricity all the clocks in the building. Sanitary drinking fountains are located on every floor. A filtering device of the latest type affords pure filtered water for laboratory and lavatory purposes. The steam heating system is of a direct and indirect type, ventilating being separate and apart from the heating apparatus. Two monster fans in the attic change the entire atmosphere of the building every fifteen minutes. No better heating and ventilating plant is to be found in any high school in the state, the device used being that approved by the Massachusetts Board of Works for the schools and public buildings of that state.

From an architectural standpoint, the building is as excellent as it is comfortable. The floor plans have been pronounced by expert school men to be ideal. The front of the building is of commendable architectural beauty. The woodwork in the interior has a golden oak finish and the furniture for the class rooms is to be of oak so as to harmonize with the trimmings of the room. Copies of the masterpieces, framed in keeping with the finish of the building, and statuary of the best type are to adorn the rooms and hallways of the building. It is doubtful whether there is today in the state of Indiana more than two buildings equal to the new High School building of which the city of New Albany is to be justly proud. Neither of these are pronounced to be superior to the one which this city is to enjoy. The building has been erected on broad, liberal lines with the feeling that it must serve this corporation for years to come and take care of the natural growth in population which New Albany bids fair to realize in the coming years. The pupils of the under classes at the High School and those who are to be their successors are to be congratulated upon the opportunity which they will have to acquire superior training through the medium of the new building.

CLASS POEM---"THE VISTA"

In a cleft through the land made by nature's own hands,
In a valley, by swift flowing stream,
A youth, fair and bold, 'neath the blue heaven stands,
Enchanted, enrapt with the scene.

By his side stands a maiden, a beautiful lass,
With the graces of Helen of Troy.
They are graduates, both, of the same High School class,
Having shared mutual sorrow and joy.

On the sides of the valley, high sloping toward sky,
Like spires decked with foliage of green
There are trees interspersed among rocks far and nigh—
Panorama of exquisite sheen.

At the foot of the cliff flows the turbulent stream,
Tossing, foaming, o'er boulder and ledge,
Rolling down through the vista till lost like a dream
In the clouds at the horizon's edge.

As they stand gazing thus with ineffable joy
Through the vista, above and around,
New visions appear to the girl and the boy,
Which with rapturous beauty abound.

As they look up the valley, far distant they see
All the life of the past as though veiled;
Their infantine years, bright and happy and free,
When childhood's bark tranquilly sailed.

Life in school shows a period of infinite gain,
As they look at the marks on the way;
Here a tree, there a stone showing pleasure or pain,
Leading down to the joys of today.

Now they turn to the future and look down the stream,
And the way with effulgence is light;
The valleys, resplendent with heaven's rays, beam—
Happy couple, thy vista is bright!

... CLASS HISTORY ...

In September of the year 1901, one hundred and four timid boys and girls appeared at the old High School building, on the corner of Bank and Spring streets, to enroll as Freshmen. It seemed as if the High School must be making great strides to appeal as a privilege and necessity to so many graduates of the graded schools. The year 1902-03 was spent in the Frisbie property, on Spring and Sixth streets, the site that had been selected by the School Board for that long looked for and much talked of "New High School building." On entering upon this year the class, who now would know themselves by no lesser name than Sophomore, numbered seventy-six. As in the fall of 1903 the new building was in process of erection, temporary quarters were secured in the DePauw college where we have ended our High School days. In these last two years our numbers have continued to diminish until at the close of this year, fifty-one dignified Seniors, nearly one-half the number with which we started, will be permitted to wear the cap and gown, and not one of those but can say in grave earnestness, "I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course."

Since our Freshman year other changes have taken place. Prof. Funk, the principal, was compelled on account of ill health to resign his position. The alumni and students hoped against hope for his recovery, for to each he stood as the perfect embodiment of all that was pure, noble and trustworthy. Yet it seemed as if this was not to be. His memory will ever be to each of us an incentive to be and to do what he felt and knew to be for our best interests. Mr. Earl Walker resigned because of business interests. The two vacancies were filled by Professors H. A. Buerk and George Kahl, who soon gained both our confidence and affection. During former years athletics had been a thing only to be dreamed of, but with the entrance of the class of '05 it became a reality. During the Junior year a boat crew was organized. Since our Sophomore year an opera has been given annually by the music classes of the school. The Senior class organized a literary society for the purpose of self-improvement in public speaking.

For the first time in the history of the High School, instead of having to search the records to find a pupil worthy of first honors, there were six girls, all of whom had kept a perfect standing during the entire four years, each being in reality the valedictorian, but in order to make it more satisfactory as to which one should speak first and last on the commencement program, it was decided to have the six girls pass a written examination. In this test Helen Pennington, receiving the highest percent, became valedictorian, and Tabitha South, being second, salutatorian. With the clinging memories of the past four years that so bind our hearts together, each member of the class of '05 will begin new activities in life, but as with hope we gaze into the future, our path to success seems to brighten and we each eagerly wish to push on, ever keeping in mind our motto, "Climb, not Cling."

... CLASS PROPHECY ...

One rainy afternoon, just such an afternoon as Providence must have intended for reading and for chocolate fudge, I wandered into a library, determined to feed both mind and body. Upon the well filled shelves I found the usual array of books, the old yellow paged dog-eared book, and the book fresh from the hands of the printer, clothed in beautiful bindings of green and red and gold; the book of travel and the book of biography, the book of poetry and the ever popular book of fiction. Truly an embarrassment of riches, thought I, as I tried to decide which it should be. But at last after taking down each book in its turn and glancing hurriedly through its pages, I finally settled on a great massive looking volume called the "Book of Life." The book was very interesting, the fudge simply delicious and so before I fairly knew it I was about one-fourth of the way through; just about to where all the characters had arrived at that extraordinary period of their lives known as Commencement. I knew it would take a long time to finish the book, (there were fifty-one characters in it), and I was almost consumed with curiosity to find out who married, if all ended happily, what became of this girl, and if that boy succeeded. And so I just couldn't keep from taking a tiny weeny peep back at the last chapter. Of course wise people say that one ought never do this and jokesmiths are forever filling their pages with jests about the thoughtless school girl who begins a book with the last chapter and works backward until she reaches the first. But with reasoning that would have done credit to the small boy about to steal the jam, who says he sees no harm in taking just the littlest taste, I, just a little guiltily, turned back to the last chapter.

The first person mentioned of those many characters was Don Atkins, elected governor of his state by the Democratic party. When in the early part of that book I had read of heated arguments in a certain civil government class, of great excitement around the second Tuesday in November, I knew that a politician was the destiny the fates had woven for Donn. Hurrying along the pages I came to two more characters bent on helping to steer the Ship of State, Lillian Emery and Rupert Foster. "Rupert's oratorical powers helped him gather many, many thorns from his chosen field," said the author. And Lillian Emery—in every home her name became a household word, her picture adorned the walls of every parlor. For she was a great woman suffragist and many a man, as he cooked the supper and rocked the baby to sleep while his wife was out making stump speeches, said not pleasant things of Lillian. But with a good mind of her own and a woman's tongue to back it she never once swerved from her path.

The Goddess of Music seems to have charmed many characters of that book. There was Harry Ritter, the great tenor, who was so greatly lionized in New York after his first appearance at the Metropolitan; Bertha Grosheider, whom the vaudeville stage claimed for its own, and Sinex and Enos, pianist and vocalist, jointly touring the great American cities. In Madame Viollette Millaire, instructor of music in a great Boston conservatory, I easily recognized the dear old Violet Miller whom the author had pictured so well in one of his early chapters. Last, but not least, there was Mary Beach, the great musician and composer. After a course of true love, which ran exceedingly smooth, she was married to "Boss" Williamson, who, as the husband of a great woman, was forced somewhat in the background. But after his book "How to Excel in Athletics," made such a hit, the laurels were about equally divided in the Williamson family.

If any of you have read the Book of Life I know you will remember those two characters of whom it was almost impossible to think separately. I believe their names were Helen Pennington and Fifiine Funk. Don't you recall how the former was sure she was going to be a teacher of literature, and how the latter intended to teach geometry in some college? Well, just about the time these young ladies were ready to realize their hopes, along came two members of the opposite sex, and you may guess the rest.

Don't you love a book where the unexpected is always happening? I could hardly believe my own eyes when I came to the place in the last chapter where it said that Cloe Eurtun, she who had never, never read a newspaper, was assistant editor on a great yellow journal. Another remarkable thing about it was that a number of Cloe Eurtun's school mates became employes of the same paper. There was Mabel Genung, the great landscape painter; Nuetzel, the far famed artist, who made his brilliant success by painting a new type of American girl. And the author hints at the fact that Mr. Nuetzel took as his model his beautiful young wife, formerly Mary Stone. Whenever any of these busy newspaper people find a spare moment in their hustling lives it is no uncommon thing to see May Perrine, the theatrical critic, Cloe, Mabel and Mary, assembled together, and talking of school days, long gone by. "For a long time," says the author, "Miss Perrine's writings mentioned no one but a certain Percival Harringham, matinee idol." And then that most obliging author causes the fancy name to disappear and Harry Heimberger, the famous actor, is revealed.

Hurrying along the pages I came to something that made me pause in surprise: "Percy Pierson, philanthropist," I read. The author then explained that the millionaire Pierson's special hobby was the founding of kindergartens for little girls, in whom from boyhood up he had ever been interested.

And now I came to Alfred Hinds and Edward Widman, of whom I remembered reading in the early part of the story. They became joint owners of a great botanical garden in Southern California. "You see," says the author, "their great love for botany never, never died." Every summer brought Mr. Braeutigam, the renowned mathematician, to the gardens for the purpose of resting his overworked mind. Here he would tell of his remarkable feats in the field of mathematics. "Were Pythagoras to return to this world and gaze upon some of Braeutigam's propositions, he no doubt, would hang his head in shame," says the author.

After viewing the gardens we are quickly taken, by the author, to one of California's great cities. He points out to us a large hospital where doctors and trained nurses are quietly hurrying about. One of the sedate looking trained nurses we are told is Ray Kreutzer and another is—who do you think? Bertha Beck, of the rosy cheeks and cunning dimples. In the same hospital is the noted Dr. Harry McKown, whose duties were not confined to that place, but extended clear across America.

A different kind of physician was Alle Garrison, he who cured the ills of mind instead of body ills. He became a great minister, and found his life work in the slums of a large city. It was very queer that a fellow-worker of Alle's should be the husband of one of his former classmates, Estelle McBride. But that is how the story turned out, even if you do open your eyes in surprise that Estelle, who, as the author describes her, seemed never to have had an earthly care, should have wedded a minister.

Hurrying along I came to four characters who had entered the field of pedagogy intent on imparting their knowledge to the masses. Here were Effie Hilt and Tabitha South, who outside of school hours, wrote a text book to be used in their home state. Eva Lemmon and George Ellis also became dispensers of knowledge. It was the ambition of the former to become State Superintendent, while George Ellis said he would be perfectly satisfied with Harvard's Presidency. "Man wants but little here below," I thought as I read that.

As I perused farther I came to two more characters of whom I had read in the early part of the book: the one, Daisy Spalding, noted for her skill in manipulating the needle; the other Lillian McCulloch, famed for a certain delicious white taffy. Both girls became teachers of domestic science in large colleges and were very successful.

Before mentioning the next two characters the author describes the scene in a great department store where a gigantic sale is in progress. How proud of their success the owners of this store should be, we think. And then what is our surprise to learn that the owners are none other than Blanche Smith and Nora Walker. Ella Wood is their advertising manager and were that personage to write a popular novel it would not be read with such eagerness and interest as are her Sunday ads.

Across the street from the department store we are told, is a massive office building. In its directory are the names of Rees and Gadiant, architects. Success crowns their efforts, after much hard work and they can now enjoy a little leisure. "It is rumored that outside of business hours Rees can deliver a speech of which our greatest orators would be envious," remarks the author.

But mentioning speakers reminds me of another character in the Book of Life, Louis Ruthenburg, attorney at law. The author says that a certain city, I think it was New Albany, become very proud of Louis, and of the fact that he had once lived there.

And now let us spend a few moments with the author in that city. Passing through its business district we are shown the great wholesale house of Louis Hartman. In its busy office we find the well known character, Gertrude Owen, bookkeeper of the firm, and Eva Haffen, its efficient stenographer. "Occasionally Robert Thorn, also a successful business man," says the author, "drops in for a friendly chat with his old friend, Louis." But alas, Robert is still unmarried and spends his solitary evenings in reading 'Reveries of a Bachelor,' 'Home Sewing Made Easy,' or books of like nature. "You may never have seen the great phenomenon of a rose without a thorn," continues the author, "but in Robert behold a still greater marvel—a Thorn without a rose."

As we are shown through the residence district of New Albany by the author, we see the homes of people, who seem in no way to be characters of the book. But in spite of their changed names we soon recognize Lora Ferguson, Vada Kenney, Sadie Starr and Abby Hannon. All these maidens, like princesses in the days of the fairies, have married and lived happily ever afterward. Benjamin Klerner, although he made some marvelous experiments in electricity, and so became famous, still remained in New Albany. This city also became noted in another way, for it was the home of the great Dishman periodical, the magazine of fun, and to many, many a person the world has seemed better and brighter, after having read and laughed at some of Will's witticisms.

I had just gotten to Arthur Newbanks, the great soldier, and was reading of his bravery and patriotism, when clang, clang, I was brought back from the glorious world of fiction into this mundane sphere, by the six o'clock bell. Six o'clock, and where were all those intervening chapters I had intended to read? It was time to go, but I resolved that though it took months, even years in which to do it, that sometime I should go back and read those other chapters. And so I closed the massive volume and placed it again upon its shelf. And as it calmly settled back into insignificance among the other books, there was never a hint of the wonderful story hidden between the massive covers of the Book of Life.

... THE THIRD OPERA ...

In pursuance of a well established custom, the students of the musical course, under the direction of Mr. D. R. Gebhart, supervisor of music in the public schools, presented Sir Arthur Sullivan's opera, H. M. S. Pinafore, upon the evenings of April 27th and 28th and on the afternoon of April 29th. The students worked with zeal and under the careful instruction of Prof. Gebhart made a most praiseworthy presentation of the drama. The cast was especially excellent. Competent critics say it was the most successful of the several operas that have been presented by the High School students. The opera was likewise a success financially. Under the management of an efficient board a large sum of money was earned, which the board desires to expend for some permanent memorial or decoration which will be placed in the new High School.

PROF. H. A. BUERK.

... W. S. G. CLUB ...

The W. S. G. Club was organized December 8, 1903, with only two officers, Bertha Grosheider, President, and Mary Stone, Secretary, and since the date of its organization has met semi-monthly. Its first birthday was celebrated by an Interurban Party, and several other entertainments have been given by its members. When the club was organized seventeen members were enrolled but since then three have been added.

THE SENIOR LITERARY SOCIETY.

IT was February 22, 1905, and people in every corner of America were celebrating the birthday of the 'Father of his Country.' Especially in southern Indiana in the city of New Albany—usually a quiet and orderly place—did excitement and patriotism run exceedingly high. And no wonder, for the city was brimful of strangers whom the air ship, touring car and underground railway had been pouring in for days. "What is the meaning of all this?" the busy river seemed to ask as she paused a moment in her onward hurry to gaze at the changed city. But the trees, the grass, the flowers and even the dark stones only laughed at the ignorant river for well they knew the meaning of all the hurry and scurry. It was the one hundredth anniversary of the 'Senior Literary Society,' a society from which during the last century had come some of the world's best writers, speakers and even musicians. And now its present members had planned a great celebration to be held in their splendid High School. Without and within one could hardly have recognized the place in its gala attire of flags and bunting. The Society had transformed the auditorium into a fac-simile of a chapel of one hundred years ago. Here were the old desks with the initials of thoughtless boy owners carved deep in their surfaces; here was the old yellow keyed piano over which the fingers of so many embryo musicians had glided, and here was the very seat in which Professor Buerk had sat as he presided over the meeting as critic. But best of all was the old yellow paged book containing the constitution and by-laws of the original society, followed by the barely legible names of its charter members.

After the vast audience had assembled, the members of the society, dressed in the quaint school boy and girl costume of one hundred years ago, carried out the same program in the same manner in which it had been rendered February 22, 1905. There was the debate, "Resolved that Washington was a greater man than Lincoln;" there was the oration, "Our Hoosier State;" there were the same readings and the same music. It was all very old fashioned and quaint and at its close a member arose and told the history of the society. He told of how Professor Buerk and the class of 'Naughty-five' had organized the club in order to increase the art of writing and speaking in the High School, and how it had grown until it surpassed even their fondest hopes and expectations; and within one hundred years it had become a society widely known throughout America. The speaker had hardly ceased when from somewhere in the audience a hat was waved wildly in the air as its owner sent up a mighty cheer. Immediately the cry was taken up and echoed and re-echoed through the chapel in words which might be recognized above the babel as, "Three cheers and a tiger for Professor Buerk, for the class of 1905, and for the Senior Literary Society."

FROM the time, when, three years ago; Prof. Earl Walker gave the preliminary impetus to the game, foot ball steadily progressed, until at the close of last season ours stood at the head of southern Indiana foot ball teams. The history of the team of 1904 may more properly be divided into two periods. First, the period of the Athletic Association foot ball team; second, that of Prof. Buerk's Independents. J. B. Williamson was elected captain of the Athletic Association team, upon the resignation of W. Beach. During this period six games were played, only one of which was lost. On September 24th the first game was played. In this game the heavy team of Tharpe's University, of Louisville, which played three of its faculty, defeated our team by a score of 23 to 0. Not daunted by this defeat, our team got down to hard practice, and when the time came three weeks later, on October 15th, to play the heavy Borden College team on their own grounds we were well prepared. Notwithstanding the fact that they weighed on an average of ten pounds more than we, and were going to "eat us up," we had the pleasure of defeating them to the tune of 22 to 0. On October 20th we easily defeated the Jeffersonville High School team by a score of 20 to 0. Our next game was played in New Albany with the Corydon High School team. Here we again scored a victory, at the end of the last half having scored 22 points while our opponents gained nothing. The following Monday we defeated Jeffersonville High School a second time. This time the score was 11 to 0. The following Saturday, October 29th, we were to have played the Manual Training High School, of Louisville, but they failed to appear on the field and Referee Beach declared the game forfeited to N. A. H. S. A week later we played Corydon High School a second time, this time on their grounds. However, when the final whistle blew neither side had been able to score, although we were well inside their territory. This closed the period of the Athletic Association team. P. R. Pierson was elected captain of Buerk's Independent foot ball team, which played its first game on November 19th with the team of Charlestown High School. Although we played only our lightest men we piled up the overwhelming score of 60 to 0. However, the real test of our ability came when a week later, on November 26th, we played the heavy Sellersburg team which had not met defeat although it had played the best teams in southern Indiana. These "huskies" all being grown men, outweighed us fifteen pounds to the man. The odds seemed greatly against us, but owing to the excellent coaching of C. Tighe, of Indiana University, the faithful practice of the players, and the careful training of our diligent instructor, Prof. H. A. Buerk, who managed and trained the team during the whole season, we had the pleasure of closing the most successful foot ball season ever known in N. A. H. S., with a victory over Sellersburg of 11 to 5.

BASKET BALL

NEVER before in the history of the High School has it been represented by so excellent a team as that of 1905. This year's team must be given all the credit for an up hill fight against an unbroken series of defeats of preceding years. During the year of 1904 the team representing the High School was so unsuccessful as to lose every game. With this gloomy record staring it in the face the '05 team determined to break the thread of defeat and produce a winning team, of which those of the future might well be proud. After the selection of the team from the large squad of candidates, and after a few practice and exhibition games, we began our schedule by playing the "crack" team of the Louisville High School, on the Louisville Y. M. C. A. floor. On account of our crippled condition at the time the game was lost. Score, 16-3. A few weeks later we received a challenge from the University School of Louisville, which, fresh from its victory over the Louisville High School and various other teams, desired to add the scalp of N. A. H. S. to its string of trophies. The dressing room, immediately after the game, was the scene of the wildest enthusiasm, because for the first time the chain of defeats was broken by the "scrappy" little team of '05. The score of this game was, University School 9—N. A. H. S. 10. The next team on the schedule was the Corydon High School. It was in this game that High School first used to a good advantage its fast team work, as seen by the score: Corydon 9—N. A. H. S. 29. The next game was with our ambitious rivals, the Third Graders, a picked team from the Louisville Y. M. C. A. These lads on two different occasions defeated the team of '04, and this led many to believe that they would lead us a merry chase this year, but it was simply a "walk-over" for High School. Score: Third Grade 12—N. A. H. S. 39.

The girls also organized a team and played several games at home, the majority of which they won. Toward the close of the season they defeated the strong team of Hamilton College on the Lexington floor by a score of 10-8. We hope the successes of this year will be only an earnest of those of the future and we trust that the crowning game in years to come in the dear old New Albany High School will be Basket Ball.

TRACK ATHLETICS has received, this year, great attention from the students of the High School. Rupert Foster was elected captain of the track team during the winter and immediately arrangements were made to enter teams in different meets. Our High School was admitted to the Southern Indiana Oratorical and Athletic Association and an oratorical delegation and track team will be sent to the meet which will be held at Salem in the latter part of May. At the Louisville Manual Training High School indoor meet, held at the Horse Show building, the night of April 1st, our relay team, composed of Rupert Foster, Edmund Thomas, Percy Pierson and Arthur Newbanks, was defeated by the relay team from the Jeffersonville High School. At this same meet Percy Pierson received a medal for third place in the quarter mile run. Rupert Foster entered the mile run, but among his opponents were some of the best college men in the country and consequently he did not score. He ran a beautiful race and clearly showed himself to be the best High School mile runner at the meet. Dan Graybrook and Henry Braeutigam entered the twelve pound shot put but received no place. On the night of April 6th, at the Louisville Y. M. C. A., our relay team, composed of Rupert Foster, Percy Pierson, J. B. Williamson and Arthur Newbanks, defeated the relay team from the Jeffersonville High School, our team running the mile in 4:14 minutes, while the time for Jeffersonville was 4:20 3-5 minutes. By winning this we regained the cup which had been won by our team two years before.

On Saturday afternoon, April 22nd, the High School held a track and field meet at the fair grounds. The other teams entered were Jeffersonville and Corydon High Schools and the New Albany Business College. The Corydon athletes failed to appear at the grounds and the meet was fought out between the other three teams. The first event on the program was the fifty-yard dash. This was won easily by our team, which captured first, second and third places. The time was :05 4-5 seconds. This seemed to take the life out of the other teams and at no time was the result of the meet in doubt. The final score was: High School 72, Jeffersonville 23, Business College 1. The High School won firsts in every event excepting the quarter mile run and the pole vault. The last event on the program was the 880 yard relay race which was won easily by the High School in 1:40 minutes. Jeffersonville finished second, Business College third. By winning this relay the High School proved its team to far outclass that of Jeffersonville. We also entered a track team in the Indiana University meet, May 6th. Eleven points were scored by the team, all of which were made by J. B. Williamson, who broke the state record in the running broad jump, clearing 21 feet, 3 inches. He received second place in both the 100 yard and the 220 yard dashes.

...BOAT CLUB...

In the early part of May, 1905, the High School Boat Club launched its boats for the second season. Every afternoon, after four o'clock, crews of boys and girls may be seen speeding up and down the river, and agile forms and ruddy cheeks have already shown the value of this form of exercise. To teach familiarity with the various currents and eddies of the river, as well as a thorough knowledge of the management of boats, and the handling of oars will be the special aim of the Commodore.

Last summer the exercise was continued and many students became not only expert oarsmen, but good swimmers as well. The practice and work of the boatmen of last year have given us a basis for excellent crews this year, and with constant and earnest practice the New Albany High School should put forth crews fully capable of competing successfully with any others along the Ohio river.

The zest with which the High School girls have entered this glorious sport is an interesting feature of the work. Being debarred from many athletic sports engaged in by the boys, the girls perceive that water is a field for exercise and out-of-door sports which they could not otherwise enjoy. Last season the girl's crews attained enough experience to be permitted to go out without the presence of Profesor Buerk, who, familiar with the river and aquatic sports, carefully coached them in their practice. The season closed without a mishap to mar its full measure of success. This season the same plan is being pursued and the results are gratifying.

PARODY ON HAMLET'S SOLILOQUY.

To do or not to do: that is the question;
Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer
The arcs and angles of Geometry,
Or to take arms against a sea of propositions,
And by opposing, go to Latin:
To miss—to flunk—nay more; for by that miss
We learn, we cause a heartache,
The loss of V, which flesh is heir to—
'Tis a consummation greatly to be feared.
To forget—to miss—to miss! perchance to fail! ay there's the rub;
For in that awful quiz, no answers come: there's the respect
That makes calamity of so long life.

For who would bear the teacher's scornful talk of misses,
The deportment list, the horrors of Geometry,
The bell's delay, the Bunker-Hill Oration,
The insolence of Latin and the spurns that patient merit takes,
When he might his withdrawal make, by a mere cut of classes?
Who would the lessons bear,
To work and worry o'er the tiresome life,
But that the dread of graduation—to sit upon the platform like a log
While others loudly sing and play—makes us rather bear our studies dry,
Than see the stare of many curious eyes.
Thus, doth pride make cowards of us all.

Is willing to stand or fall by its standard of instruction—by its thorough instructors who know the difficulties met by the student; who know how to help him over those hard places; who know by actual contact with and in the business world just what an employer expects from a Stenographer or Bookkeeper, in the shape of ability, speed, accuracy and deportment. They are actually experts in the lines they teach. Theirs is not a text book knowledge—but a working, bread-earning, promotion-begetting knowledge.

Instruction from this kind of instructors is worth all it costs, even though that is a little more than the average. It is not what you pay, but what you get, and what you get per week after graduation.

A SCHOOL-ROOM ROMANCE.

It was a dark, gloomy morning; the melancholy was so thick that you could cut it with a knife; sadness was hanging around in lumps; the sun seemed as if it were locked up doing thirty days time. It was examination day.

Mary sat in a remote corner of the school room. Ah! what a lovely picture to behold, with her soft blue eyes, pink cheeks, wavy blond hair and ruffled brain. At her right sat Arthur, at her left, Carl, two intensely bitter rival suitors for her fair hand.

As she looked over the mysterious slips of questions, she exclaimed in a stage whisper, "I can't do that sum." No response from Arthur, he was also deeply in the mire. Carl passed her a note, her face brightened with joy and delight. What were the contents? Was it a billetdoux, burning with love and sympathy? No, it was far more important to her—it was the examination answers.

As they walked from the school yard, arm in arm, she was heard to say, "Carl, you are a real hero, the kind you read about in books, you can lead, carry or drag me to the altar."

They lived happily ever afterwards.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Letters like the following are received from time to time by the Vista Information Bureau.

I am troubled with a very much enlarged cranium and am subject to spells during which I talk freely of "Kansas," "my state," etc. What do you advise?

F - E D T - O M - O N.

It would probably be beneficial if you could get some kind friend to take you into the woodshed and exercise his Number Elevens on the seat of your trousers, once every two hours.

There is a young man with whom I am deeply in love, and have good reason to believe that he intends to propose. Do you think that with economy a young couple could live on $15.95 a year?

L - I - I - N E - E - Y.

We think that it would take at least $16.00 a year with the closest economy. You might put it to a test however.

I am a very talented and attractive young man. My presence is imposing and I have no faults. One thing, however, worries me greatly. I am afraid that the Vista Board will not sufficiently emphasize my worth. What can I do?

D - N A - K - N S.

We have made every effort to get some member of the Board to write you up, but have failed. If it were not so late we would suggest that you write something yourself. We hope you will bear your disappointment manfully, and suggest that you try to obtain notoriety in some other way.

I have observed symptoms which make me fear that my heart is turning to Stone. What is a cure? Would you advise matrimony?

C - - I, N - E T - E L.

You do not tell us what the symptoms are, but from observation we would judge that your case is beyond help. We believe, however, that matrimony would give partial relief.

One headful of brains, to which add equal portions of algebra and geometry. Mix well. Then slowly stir in with this a good sized cupful of literature, a medium sized cupful of history, a pinch of animal life, a pinch of physics and a heaping teaspoonful of botany. After this has been well mixed in the brain add the most important ingredient—the Latin. Care should be taken not to add too much of this, as it makes the dish too strong for the average person. It is very healthful, as there is no danger whatever of overeating. The seasoning—deportment—may be added according to taste.

... A CONSOLATION ...

The days are dark and dreary,
The world seems scarce alive,
As I sit here thinkin', writin',
For the class of nineteen-five.

There's joy, sweet consolation,
Pleasure too, I must admit,
But all these are overshadowed
By the kicks of those I've hit.

Didn't mean to do it neither,
Tried to tell the honest facts;
Tried to come right out and say it,
'Stead of talkin' 'hind their backs.

But there's trouble still a brewin',
Guess I'd better run and hide;
Better men than I for duty,
Have laid down their lives and died.

Maybe in the distant future,
They'll forgive me and be glad
That I didn't tell all about 'em,
Gee! just think! what if I had?
